House Bill No. 1203

Introduced by Rep. Manuel E. Zamora and Rep. Prospero S. Amatong

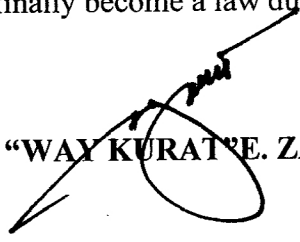

EXPLANATORY NOTE

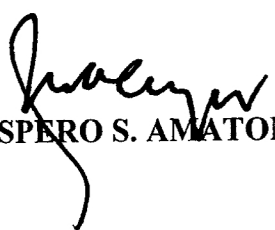

The effective, swift and judicious dispensation of justice is one of the benchmarks of political modernization. Without it, chaos and anarchic elements will rule the day and plunge society into a jungle of lawlessness. The presence of formal structures to ensure the application of the rule of law among the populace, on the other hand, will most certainly deter the commission of unlawful acts and subordinate everyone to abide by the legal covenants of society.

In a country like the Philippines, the wheel of justice is often being seen to be moving at snail-pace. The need to create additional trial court branches in order to expedite the disposition of cases and improve the administration of justice, is widely considered as an effective antidote to the problem. More trial courts will mean declogging the sala of magistrates from too much cases and speeding up their resolution.

The case of the infant Compostela Valley Province says it all. When it was created in 1998 from the then undivided Davao del Norte Province, the Regional Trial Court (RTC) Branch 3 based in the capital town of Nabunturan, was inevitably tasked to handle all cases coming from the new province's eleven municipalities. Not to mention its docket being clogged, the RTC sala is in the second legislative district—a geographical inconvenience for the municipalities comprising the first district. Hence, the need to create additional trial court branches for the judicial requirements of the first and second congressional districts has become imperative. This bill addresses this concern. Its approval is most respectfully requested.

It should be worth noting that this bill was approved on Third Reading during the 12th Congress and was transmitted to the Senate but was stalled there. We are hopeful that it will finally become a law during the 13th Congress.
