THIRTEENTH CONGRESS

House Bill No. 3720

Introduced by HON. ROILO GOLEZ

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Republic Act 4373, having been enacted into law on 19 June 1965, and amended by RA 5175 04 August 1967, paved the way for the professionalization of social work practice in the Philippines.

Recent developments proved that there is a need to update the law in order to remain responsive to the needs of social workers, its clientele groups, and the society in general.

In June 2004, thousands of social work graduates were not able to take the Board Examinations. This was so, because of their failure to satisfy the basic requirements for applicants as provided for under Section 12 of the law.

In this connection, it is noteworthy that, most, if not all, applicants were, at the time of the examination, falling between the ages of twenty (20) and above; and, this was brought about by the latest development in our educational system that requires one to be at least six (6) years of age in order to be able to enter primary education, compared to seven (7) years old in the past.

This Bill, therefore, seeks to give opportunity to young social work graduates to take the examination and become economically and socially productive by joining the workforce as professionals. It, likewise, intends to minimize the government's lack of social work professionals that are essential in the implementation of its major programs and services.

Furthermore, the bill aims to continually capacitate the social workers by requiring them to embrace the habit of lifelong education. Changes and developments in the global scene, which have direct impact to Philippine society, compel social workers to keep themselves abreast of the latest social technology available and develop indigenous means to respond to these challenges. This is significant to ensure that their clients and the society as a whole will benefit from the social workers' intervention.

Finally, the Bill aims to upgrade the penalties for violations of various provisions concerning the practice of social work in order to protect the profession as well as the public against fraudulent and malicious acts.

In view of the foregoing premises, the approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
