EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Province of Siquijor is one of the few provinces in the country today that does not have a National Science High School of its own. To compensate for this want however, the Provincial Government and the DECS Division Office created and established its own locally funded science high school known as the Siquijor Provincial Science High School (SPSHS) in 1996.

The SPSHS maintain a five (5) schoolroom building constructed in a three (3) hectare lot at Caipilan, Siquijor, Siquijor. It has a current enrollment of 116, spread in four high school year levels. It has seven (7) faculty members who are themselves picked from the cream of the province's teaching force.

Despite severe fiscal constraints, the SPSHS has been run on a stringent adherence to the curricular and standards of a true science school. In the process it has become a hallmark of academic excellence, its studentry widely regarded as a gathering of Siquijor's finest. It is now about time that the school be elevated to its peerage and constituted as a true national science high school.
