

Republic of the Philippines
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Quezon City

15th CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 55

INTRODUCED BY REPRESENTATIVE LORENZO R. TAÑADA III

It has been 23 years since the Commission on Human Rights (CHR) has been in existence as an independent, constitutionally created body tasked to promote and protect human rights. In these years, the Commission has experienced many triumphs as well as challenges in its work, through several legislations, and a series of judicial interpretations on its mandate.

Drawing lessons from the problems, challenges and long experience of the institution, this bill strengthens the Commission's mandates and structural organization to better respond to the demands of human rights situation on the ground. Specifically, the bill does the following:

1) Expand the Commission's investigation mandate from purely civil and political rights violations to cover economic, social, and cultural rights violations as well.

This expansion in scope is borne out of the diversity in human rights violations that our people face. Indeed, the lessons of the dark Martial Law years emphasized the protection of rights of political detainees; humane treatment of prisoners, fair and public trials and the prevention of tortures, cases of disappearances salvagings and hamlettings. Yet, we can no longer turn a blind eye on the many reports of marginalized, disadvantaged and vulnerable persons, and indigenous peoples summarily killed in the cause of defending economic, social and cultural rights.

2) Define the Scope of Commission's Legal and Preventive Measures

Among the specific powers relating to the exercise of its investigative powers, the Commission can

- Compel attendance of witnesses and production of evidence through the issuance of subpoenas;
- Issue orders and directives including injunctions, restraining orders directing any member of government's military or police forces as well as public officials and employees, or any person acting under their direct control and supervision to desist from hiding, transferring or torturing a detainee and allow access to counsel, physician and relatives;
- Have unrestrained and unhampered inspection of detention premises;
- Order the transfer of persons deprived of their liberty and in danger of reprisal to secure his/her safety;
- Issue General writs of injunction order for the prevention acts that would tend to cause irreparable harm and have the effect of rendering the investigation of the Commission moot and academic;

- Issue Mandatory Protection Orders;
- Deputation of Lawyers, legal aid group or medical organizations to assist in investigative functions;
- Deputation of other government or private institutions to provide protection to human rights violation victims and to prevent further violations;
- Exercise powers of preventive suspension and referral to disciplining authority.

3) Grant Concurrent Prosecutorial Powers

In response to the clamor to provide the Commission with teeth to strengthen its findings of human rights violations and its corresponding violation of administrative and penal laws, the power to prosecute is proposed to be included in the CHR's powers and functions. Intended not to replace or duplicate the work of the prosecution arm of government, it stands by to ensure the resolution of cases, elicit human rights jurisprudence and ultimately, exact state accountability for human rights violations.

4) Provide Full Fiscal Autonomy

Another drawback that the Commission has been confronted with is the Supreme Court decision on CHREA vs CHR, citing that the commission only possesses "limited fiscal autonomy" considering the absence of an express statement that the Commission is granted fiscal autonomy in the constitution. In line with the intention of the framers of the 1987 Constitution, this proposal grants full fiscal autonomy to operationalize CHR's fiscal independence.

5) Ensure a Transparent and Credible Selection and Appointment Process

A Nominations Committee is set up to ensure a transparent and credible process in the selection and appointment of Commission members.

Principles relating to the status and functioning of national institutions for protection and promotion of human rights provide guidance in this process of appointment of the Chairman and Commissioners.

6) Enable a Robust Organization and Structure

The bill seeks to capacitate the Commission to strengthen and/or create offices that will ensure human rights career development and retention of qualified, deserving officers that will enhance professionalism, continuity and facilitate institutional memory. This includes the creation of the Assistant Commissioner level, Directorate and officers heading various offices and units corresponding to the major mandates of human rights investigation, advocacy and monitoring. A main feature of the organization is the strengthening of CHR regional offices with full staff complement taking human rights promotion and protection at the level of local governance.

As a Human Rights advocate, I earnestly seek the urgent passage of this measure, known as the "Commission on Human Rights Act of 2010", to nurture an independent national human rights institution that is mandated to promote and protect human rights of all persons within the Philippines and Filipinos abroad and bring about a culture that extols the principles and standards of human rights for all.
