

Republic of the Philippines
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Quezon City, Metro Manila
Sixteenth Congress
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 3626

Introduced by Honorable Herminia B. Roman

EXPLANATORY NOTE

This bill seeks to provide the free use of computers with internet access in all public libraries in the Philippines, amending for the purpose Republic Act No. 7743, entitled, "An Act Providing For the Establishment of Congressional, City and Municipal Libraries and Barangay Reading Centers Throughout the Philippines, Appropriating the Necessary Funds Therefore and For Other Purposes."

Republic Act No. 7743 was enacted to promote the moral and intellectual well-being of the people, elevate the literacy level of every Filipino and recognize the vital role of knowledge and information in nation-building.

At present, there are 688 public libraries in the country: four congressional district libraries; fifty two provincial libraries; ninety seven city libraries, and five hundred thirty five municipal libraries.

Public libraries are located in, established and maintained by the barangay, municipality, city, province, or congressional district that cater primarily to the information needs of their respective constituents through reading materials, reference books, and other informative documents. With the establishment of public libraries throughout the country, the government is helping the members of the community specially the students to broaden their research skills, enhance their reading ability and stimulate their desire for knowledge.

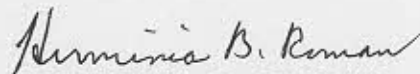

Although there are many informative materials available in public libraries, it is essential that free use of computers with internet access be provided to allow the students and the community to explore a wider array of information necessary for quality education. This will encourage the entire community to take advantage of the political, social, economic, educational and even career opportunities made available through the internet.

The internet is a network of computers, designed to receive and send data in the form of e-mails, blogs and webcasts. It can be likened to a super-massive server armed with a plethora of information which is used by billions of people simultaneously. It is a virtual treasure trove of information. Accessing the internet becomes a common practice in seeking assistance to gather resources for homework, office presentation and supplements for other research work. It has a major effect on education and has played an important role in the advancement of mankind.

Public libraries, if properly equipped and managed, can be the most economical and effective source of information that will enhance and promote moral and intellectual well-being.

In view of the foregoing, immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
