EXPLANATORY NOTE

Barangay health workers (BHWs) play a very crucial role in the delivery of primary health care in the country. They administer first aid, provide maternal and child care, and assist in nutrition education, feeding and immunization. Their services are also tapped to disseminate information on family planning, sanitation and hygiene, and to collect and record vital statistics essential to national policies, among others.

Being in the frontline, their services are expected to reach families in the remotest corner of the community, even when they face unavoidable risks.

In spite of their invaluable service, it is saddening to note that not much has been done to acknowledge their efforts by alleviating the economic condition of BHWs.

As a fitting recognition to the thousands of BHWs who do not mind breaking their backs serving their communities, this measure proposes to amend Republic Act 7883, also known as "Barangay Health Workers' Act of 1995" by providing a monthly honorarium of not less than One Thousand Pesos (PhP1,000.00) to every qualified BHW.

Approval of this proposal is earnestly sought.
