EXPLANATORY NOTE

AN ACT PROVIDING FOR THE CREATION OF THE PHILIPPINE NATIVE ANIMAL DEVELOPMENT CENTER, DEFINING ITS POWERS AND FUNCTIONS, APPROPRIATING FUNDS THEREFOR, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Native animal is defined as “an animal originating from a particular place or animals known to be present and breeding in the locality for at least five generations;” and owned by the locals in the community. Some of the important attributes of a native animal includes its taste, nutraceutical properties, adaptability to the environment, heat tolerance, ability to subsist on low-quality feeds and limited water supply, and ability to withstand extreme weather conditions.¹

According to the Food and Fertilizer Technology Center for the Asian and Pacific Region, native animals have provided valuable contributions in the cultural, social, and economic status of farming communities in the rural areas.² In addition, native animals have been known to contain high quality protein. Aside from this, raising native animals can become an alternative source of livelihood for small-scale farmers especially in the rural areas.

Government support is an essential component in order for native production be sustainable for our farmers. In 2010, the Bureau of Animal Industry (BAI) launched the Philippine Native Animal Development (PNAD) that seeks to develop policies and initiatives for sustainable conservation, production, and marketing of native animals. Under Administrative Order No. 15, BAI is directed to formulate, in consultation with stakeholders a Road Map for the development of native animal industry.

However, major issues remain unresolved in the native animal industry. Native animal producers particularly from the far-flung areas do not achieve optimum economic benefits because of inefficient marketing channels. Other issues cited were the demand for consistent quality and stable supply of native animals, standardization of the production protocol, issues on marketing and trading systems, strategies, and other locality-specific consumer preferences.³

This bill seeks to institutionalize the Philippine Native Animal Development (PNAD) program that was spearheaded by the Department of Agriculture and create a Philippine Native Animal Development Center that will promote the scientific propagation, processing, utilization and development of Philippine native animals. In addition, this bill aims to strengthen research and development on native animals with the end view of addressing our country's problem on food security.

In view thereof, approval of this Bill is earnestly sought.
