EXPLANATORY NOTE

Under the ambit of the COVID-19 pandemic, the World Organisation for Animal Health¹ and the World Veterinary Association (WVA) is in solidarity that specific veterinary activities, as well as the roles and responsibilities of the veterinary profession for public health, are essential to ensure a continuum in food safety, disease prevention, and emergency management.

In the Philippines, it is by virtue of Republic Act No. 9395, or the SLSU Charter, that has been mandated in providing advanced education, professional, technological instruction in the fields of allied medicine, education, engineering, agriculture, fisheries, forestry, environment, arts and sciences, accountancy, business and entrepreneurship, and other relevant fields of study.

This proposed measure seeks to establish a College of Veterinary Medicine in the Southern Luzon State University Catanauan Campus. In the middle of an existing health crisis, our veterinarians play an important role in investigating animal and human disease outbreaks such as food-borne illnesses, influenza, and rabies. They are also essential in protecting our public health by investigating zoonotic diseases and other diseases affecting the health of animals and people.

By instituting the proposed College in the Municipality of Catanauan, we democratize access to higher education. Similarly, with Quezon Province being geographically adjacent to animal agriculture regions, it will primarily benefit from this piece of legislation. To this end, we improve the health of our animals, which has a domino effect of improving the quality of life for our communities.

For this reason, the approval of this measure is respectfully sought.
