House Bill No. 10337

EXPLANATORY NOTE

This legislation seeks to rename the Central Azucarera de Tarlac High School - Main in Tarlac City into Benigno S. Aquino III High School.

Pursuant to the Department of Education Order No. 40, series of 2014 on the “Establishment, Merging, Conversion, Naming/Renaming of Public Schools”, all public schools may be named or renamed by the President, through a proclamation or by Congress through legislation.

Benigno S. Aquino III, popularly known as Noynoy or PNoy was an economist and public servant. He was the only son of the democracy icons, former president Corazon Aquino and former senator Benigno “Ninoy” Aquino. His commitment to serve the country and continue the legacy of his parents were evident as he served as a Congressman for the Province of Tarlac from 1998 to 2007, a Senator from 2007 to 2010, placing 6th in the national elections and eventually as the 15th President of the Republic of the Philippines from 2010 to 2016.

PNoy’s term as president was marked by stable and growing economy. During his time, the Philippines was known as a Rising Tiger due to the country’s rapid economic expansion. Pnoy stood for Filipinos’ reinvigorated passion to build a nation of justice, peace, and inclusive progress.

In recognition of his immense contributions and selfless service to Filipinos, the approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
