EXPLANATORY NOTE

This proposed measure, popularly known as the “Passive Income and Financial Intermediary Taxation Act (PIFITA)” was approved on Third and Final Reading in the 18th Congress primarily authored under my leadership as Committee on Ways and Means Chairperson.

This measure will redesign the taxation of the financial sector by making it simpler, fairer, and more efficient, critical to its role in the long-term growth and development of the economy. In 2020, the government’s total collection from bank deposits amounted to ₱58.84 billion while the percentage taxes on financial institutions was around ₱42.90 billion.¹ These significant contributions add to government coffers used to finance large-scale infrastructure, create more and better jobs, and boost economic growth.

Currently, there are 80 tax rates and tax bases on passive income, financial services, and transactions. The tax on income meanwhile varies depending on the term of the instrument, the issuer, the currency involved, and the residency of the income recipient. Likewise, stamp taxes depend on the types of instrument or transactions involved, the terms, and the issuers. These variations in the tax base and tax rates, even among comparable financial instruments and transactions, result in a complicated tax structure with plenty of room for tax arbitrage. Further, disparities in tax treatments interfere with investment decisions.

Moreover, the inequitable tax burden on investments in equity and some long-term instruments allows the rich to pay lower taxes, while working-class individuals pay higher rates because they can only afford short-term investments or savings deposits.

¹ BIR Annual Report

This measure aims to level the playing field by harmonizing tax treatments for certain transactions of financial institutions. It seeks to simplify the complex structure of the financial sector, ensure neutrality in tax treatment across financial institutions, improve equity among investors and savers, minimize arbitrage opportunities, and promote capital market development and tax competitiveness within the context of financial globalization, increased capital mobility and financial inclusion.

To achieve these, the bill proposes the following reforms:

- 1) Reduction in the number of final withholding tax rates on interest income. A single rate of 15% final tax on interest income, in general, will be imposed regardless of currency, maturity, issuer, and other differentiating factors.
- 2) Unification of tax rates on passive income. A single rate of 15%, in general, will be levied on interest income, dividends and capital gains.
- 3) Harmonization of business taxes on financial intermediaries. A single gross receipt tax (GRT) rate of 5% will be charged on banks, quasi banks, and certain non-bank financial intermediaries (FIs). The distinction between lending and non-lending income, as well as the maturity of the instrument, will be removed. All types of income will be taxed at 5%, except dividends, equity shares, and net income of subsidiaries, which will remain exempt.

Pre-need, pension, life, and HMO insurance will be taxed uniformly at 2% of the premium. Non-life insurance will remain subject to VAT, while crop insurance will remain exempt from VAT. Income other than the premium will be subject to VAT.

- 4) Removal of the initial public offering (IPO) tax which is found to be detrimental to capital market development. The IPO tax will be removed as it is seen as an imposition on capital and is detrimental to capital markets, particularly since collections from IPO tax are minimal, only averaging ₱273 million annually from 2000 to 2016. Income tax on listed shares of stock and debt securities will also be gradually removed to further promote capital market development.
- 5) Rationalization of Documentary Stamp Tax (DST) to promote capital mobility. The tax treatment of debt and equity will be equalized by: (a) a gradual reduction of the 0.6% stock transaction tax (STT) by 0.1 percentage point every year until it reaches 0 by 2026, and (b) a temporary imposition of a 0.1% transaction tax on listed and traded debt instruments at the Philippine Dealing Exchange (PDEx), which will also be removed by 2026. Finally, documents which are non-monetary in nature will also be exempted from DST.

The passage of this bill is earnestly sought as it will reform the taxation system of the financial sector, helping accelerate the movement of capital and grow the economy.

SECTION. 1. Title. – This Act shall be known as the “Passive Income and Financial Intermediary Taxation Act.”

SEC. 2. Declaration of Policy. – The financial sector plays a significant role in the long-term growth of the national economy. The optimal taxation of capital markets, and the products and transactions that come with them, is an essential element in developing the capital market. Towards this end, the State recognizes the necessity of a simpler, fairer, more efficient, and regionally more competitive tax system for passive income and financial intermediation to encourage savings and develop as well as deepen the capital markets. Accordingly, the State adopts the following policies:

1. The State shall promote and develop a tax system that provides neutrality in the tax treatment across financial institutions and financial instruments.
2. The State shall endeavor to simplify an otherwise complex tax system for easy compliance.
3. The State shall ensure that the taxation of passive income and financial transactions is equitable across all stakeholders and discourages arbitrage opportunities.
