EXPLANATORY NOTE

The physical change impacted by technological advancement and the fast progressive thinking and imagination of this generation whose awareness has become more dynamic, have truly inspired the Nueva Ecija University of Science and Technology (NEUST) to provide more meaningful lifelong learning experiences and opportunities to its students.

The University with two of its primary campuses, which are the General Tinio Street Campus and Sumacab Campus, are located in the most established and economically progressive city of the province, which is Cabanatuan City. Nueva Ecija has a total population of 2,310,134 and has a strong, economically active workforce, 64.54% of which are either engaged into small or medium enterprise or employed in the public and private institutions in the province. The addition of two satellite campuses by virtue of law to the six satellite campuses which are already existing for decades, serve as conduits of development for the province of Nueva Ecija by providing inclusive and accessible quality education, reaching out to the indigenous peoples and other marginalized sector within the province and beyond.

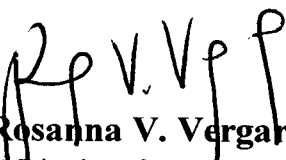

The proposed conversion of NEUST into a comprehensive university aims to provide competence and skills not only in science and technology but to offer new programs and develop other professionals needed in the country and by the global labor market. The University also desires to nurture the hearts and minds of students to enable them to seek for solutions to the challenges posed by environmental degradation and promote the formation of a sustainable society.

Moreover, this proposal seeks to harmonize the creative abilities of the youth in the arts with the technical knowledge through science and technology. This will further allow the University to become more responsive and relevant to the diverse needs of the community, the province, and the country.

1 The availability of vast information thru the web has influenced the youth with various beliefs and
2 practices, thereby exposing them to the challenges of the world. The University shall provide
3 access to students with a wider range of skills and talents both based on the academic and non-
4 academic learnings and experiences. Thus, once converted into a comprehensive university,
5 NEUST shall offer a wide range of disciplines that will ensure that graduates shall become well-
6 rounded individuals not only in their chosen fields of study but even beyond.
