EXPLANATORY NOTE

This measure seeks to declare the Municipality of Rosario in the Province of Cavite as the "Tinapa Capital of the Philippines" in order to promote and recognize the industry of tinapa or smoked fish, and to further boost its production and competitiveness in both the domestic and foreign markets.

The history of the Municipality of Rosario can be traced back as a humble fishing town. During the Spanish period, it was originally called Tejero which originated from the Spanish word "tejer" or "to weave" because weaving fish nets was the main occupation of the women.¹ During the Philippine Revolution, the town was called Salinas because of its prominent saltmaking industry.²

Among many exquisite fish products such as daing (fried fish), bagoong (fish paste), and patis (fish sauce), Rosario is most associated with the finest and world-renowned smoked fish or Tinapang Salinas. The famous Tinapang Salinas has been considered as a cultural heritage by many Caviteños. Likewise, the Municipality of Rosario celebrates the "Tinapa Festival" every month of October to honor and promote the renowned local produce to bring competitiveness and international recognition.

As such, it is high time that the nation recognizes the said municipality as the "Tinapa Capital of the Philippines" as it will further boost its production, as well as provide additional livelihood to its residents.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate approval of this measure is earnestly sought.
