AN ACT
DEFINING AND PROHIBITING POLITICAL DYNASTIES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Bayan Muna Party-List first filed a House Bill prohibiting political dynasties in 2001. Similar measures filed by the Makabayan Bloc in the succeeding Congresses were repeatedly ignored by the Chamber. It is high time that we pass a Bill of great importance, as mandated by our Constitution.

Article II, Section 26 of the Constitution expressly provides: "The State shall guarantee equal access to public service and prohibit political dynasty, as may be defined by law."

Social reform is the evident agenda behind this provision and the objective is clear. The extended family system, an otherwise beneficial concept when applied to the social aspects of human behavior, has found its pernicious effects in the political arena where public office has become the exclusive domain of influential families and clans. Such families have become so well-entrenched in Philippine politics that they have monopolized political power and public resources at all levels of government.

Once a politician is elected to public office, he or she immediately builds a strong political base to ensure not only his or her re-election but also that such electoral support will extend to one's spouse or descendants or next of kin. These elected officials secure and consolidate their economic interest by perpetuating their families or clans in public office—indeed, establishing a dynasty, much like the hereditary monarchs and imperial families of old, using public service. This situation is characteristic of the patronage system of politics that hinders the development of the country.

The domination of political dynasties in Philippine elections became more evident during the May 2025 elections. They have fielded multiple candidates in national and local positions in order to further concentrate, consolidate, and perpetuate their political power. According to the Philippine Center for Investigative Journalism, at least 18 obese political dynasties, or those with at least five clan members who are active in politics, have won in midterm elections.¹ This is different from the typical “fat” and “thin” classification of political dynasties. Fat political dynasties refer to those officials who have relatives that simultaneously hold office while thin dynasties refer to those officials whose relative(s) used to hold elected office – they follow each other sequentially.²

A report by the United Nations Development Programme written by Prof. Temario Rivera revealed that of the 77 provinces included in the study, 72 provinces or 94 percent have political families. Further, the average number of political families per province is 2.31, meaning there are at least two political clans in most of the provinces. According to Temario, since the restoration of elections in 1987, most dominant political families have succeeded in winning gubernatorial and congressional races. Even the party-list system—supposedly to give the marginalized and underrepresented sectors opportunity to participate in the lawmaking process—is now also dominated by political families and big economic interests.

The socio-economic and political inequities prevalent in Philippine society limit public office to members of ruling families. In many instances, voters, for convenience and out of cultural mindset, look up to these economically and politically dominant families as dispensers of favors, material and otherwise, and tend to elect relatives of these politically dominant families.

As a means to give force and effect to the social justice provisions of the Constitution which provides for the diffusion of economic and political influence, it is necessary that the political arena be leveled by opening public office to persons who are equally qualified to aspire on even terms with those from politically dominant families.

In light of the foregoing, this Bill is hereby proposed to give real teeth to the Constitutional mandate and strengthen the call for new politics to lay the basis of greater empowerment for the greater number of Filipinos.

AN ACT
DEFINING AND PROHIBITING POLITICAL DYNASTIES

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Republic of the Philippines in Congress assembled:

SECTION 1. Title. – This Act shall be known as “The Anti-Political Dynasty Act.”

SEC. 2. Declaration of Policy. – It is the policy of the State to guarantee equal access to opportunities for public service, and prohibit political dynasties.

SEC. 3. Political Dynasty Defined. – For purposes of this Act, a political dynasty is hereby defined as a family or clan that concentrates, consolidates, or perpetuates their political power by holding public office simultaneously or successively.

SEC. 4. Prohibition on Political Dynasty. – Political dynasties are hereby prohibited. To this end:

- 1) No person shall hold or run for any elective national or local office simultaneously with another within the fourth degree of consanguinity or affinity, whether legitimate or illegitimate, full or half blood; and
- 2) No person within the prohibited civil degree of relationship to an incumbent elected official shall immediately succeed to the position of the latter.

SEC. 5. Applicability. – This Act shall govern and be applicable to the next elections and to all subsequent elections thereafter.

SEC. 6. Statement with the Commission on Elections. – Any person running for any elective public office shall file a sworn statement with the COMELEC that they do not fall under the prohibition under Section 4 of this Act.

SEC. 7. Effect of Violation of Prohibition. – The COMELEC shall, motu proprio or upon verified petition of any interested party, deny due course to any certificate of candidacy filed in violation of this Act.

The votes cast for the disqualified candidate, if any, shall not be counted and deemed not counted nor shall such candidate be proclaimed nor be qualified to assume office.

SEC. 8. Period for Filing Petition for Disqualification. – Any citizen of voting age, candidate, or duly registered political party, organization, or coalition of political parties may file with the COMELEC, after the last day for filing of certificates of candidacy and before proclamation, a petition to disqualify a candidate on grounds provided for under Section 4 hereof.

SEC. 9. Summary Proceedings. – The petition shall be heard and decided summarily by the COMELEC, after due notice and hearing, and its decision shall be executory after the lapse of five (5) days from receipt thereof by the losing party.

SEC. 10. Effect of Petition if Unresolved Before Completion of Canvass. – If the petition, for reasons beyond the control of the COMELEC, cannot be decided before the completion of the canvass, the votes cast for the respondent shall be included in the counting and canvassing: Provided, however, that if the basis for such disqualification is strong, their proclamation shall be suspended notwithstanding the fact that they received the winning number of votes in the election: Provided further, that in cases where disqualified candidate has been proclaimed they shall ipso facto forfeit their right to the office.

SEC. 11. Rules and Regulations. – The COMELEC shall promulgate the rules and regulations for the implementation of the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 12. Repealing Clause. – All laws inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed or modified accordingly.

SEC. 13. Separability Clause. – If any of the sections or provisions of this Act is held invalid, all the other provisions not affected thereby shall remain valid.

SEC. 14. Effectivity Clause. – This Act shall take effect fifteen (15) days from the date of its publication in the Official Gazette or any newspaper of general circulation.

Approved,
