EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Philippine bamboo industry holds immense potential for addressing critical national development goals—rural employment generation, poverty alleviation, climate change mitigation, and the promotion of sustainable local industries. As a fast-growing, renewable, and versatile resource, bamboo can be a powerful tool for both economic advancement and environmental protection.

Despite this, the industry has long been constrained by fragmented support, weak coordination among agencies, and limited access to resources, technology, and markets. These challenges have hindered the full-scale commercialization and competitiveness of Philippine bamboo products, both domestically and internationally.

Recognizing these gaps, the Philippine Bamboo Industry Development Act, recently approved on Third Reading by the House of Representatives, seeks to establish a clear and comprehensive policy framework to unlock the potential of the bamboo industry as a driver of inclusive and sustainable development.

This measure:

- a) Strengthens the Philippine Bamboo Industry Development Council (PBIDC) to lead in policy and program implementation;
- b) Creates the Bamboo Industry Research and Development Center (BIRDC) to spearhead innovation, capability-building, and inter-agency coordination;
- c) Institutionalizes the Philippine Bamboo Industry Development Program, with concrete goals for propagation, processing, product development, and market expansion;
- d) Mandates LGUs to establish their own local bamboo industry councils and formulate localized development plans;

- e) Provides a wide range of investment incentives, including tax relief, exemption from forest charges, financing access, insurance coverage, and export facilitation.

Anchored on the constitutional mandate for the State to promote self-reliance, scientific advancement, and equitable access to economic opportunities (Article XII, Sections 1 and 6; Article XIV, Section 10), this Act aligns with the country's goals for green industrialization, agroforestry development, and climate resilience.

Through this measure, the Philippine government reaffirms its commitment to a people-centered and resource-based economic model—one that uplifts rural communities, protects the environment, and builds an innovative and globally competitive bamboo industry.

Thus, the immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
