HOUSE BILL NO. 8421

Introduced by Representative Howard A. Guintu

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Our national hero, Dr. José Rizal, once said that the youth are the hope of the motherland, "ang kabataan ang pag-asa ng bayan." This truth reminds us that the future of our nation depends on the energy, creativity, and commitment of our young people. In particular, their active participation is crucial in sustaining vital sectors such as agriculture and fisheries, which remain key contributors to the Philippine economy.

Section 7, Article XIII of the 1987 Constitution provides that the State shall protect the rights of subsistence farmers and fisherfolk, particularly by supporting them through appropriate technology, research, financial assistance, and other forms of development. It is the duty of the State to ensure the long-term sustainability of these sectors by encouraging and empowering the next generation of Filipino farmers and fisherfolk.

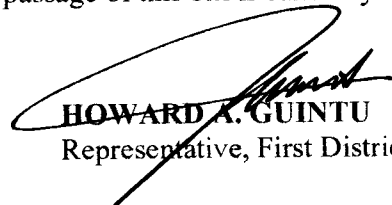

Today, however, agriculture and fisheries face a pressing challenge, declining youth participation and an aging workforce. In many rural communities, the hardships of farming and fishing have shaped family perceptions of the future for their children. Many parents, seeing the difficulties and uncertainties of these livelihoods, encourage their children to pursue careers outside agriculture and fisheries, believing that other professions may provide greater financial security and better opportunities for social mobility. As a result, farming and fishing are increasingly seen as less viable career paths among young Filipinos.

Studies and reports confirm this trend. The Philippine Institute for Development Studies¹ (PIDS) notes that younger generations are increasingly reluctant to pursue farming as a livelihood due to unstable earnings and limited access to productive resources. Supporting this, Manila Bulletin reports that the average age of Filipino farmers is now 57 years old, and young Filipinos are increasingly disinterested in agriculture due to underpayment, limited opportunities, and the appeal of alternative careers, including working abroad². Despite these challenges, the article emphasizes that inspiring youth-led agri-enterprises illustrate the sector's potential to generate economic stability, foster innovation, and create meaningful social impact.

This proposed measure seeks to address these challenges by establishing the Young Farmers and Fisherfolk Challenge Program. The Program will provide young farmers and fisherfolk with access to education and training, start-up capital and financial services, marketing platforms, green jobs, and opportunities to participate in policy-making that directly affects the agriculture sector. To ensure the effective implementation of the Program, the bill also creates the Young Farmers and Fisherfolk Challenge Council, which will oversee its operations, promote coordination among government agencies, academic institutions, and the private sector, and support youth-led innovation and entrepreneurship.

Through this Program, the State aims to nurture a new generation of skilled, innovative, and empowered farmers and fisherfolk who can drive agricultural modernization, strengthen food security, and foster inclusive rural development. By investing in the youth and providing them with knowledge, resources, and opportunities, the Philippines can ensure the long-term sustainability and competitiveness of agriculture and fisheries. This is how we honor the vision of our national hero, by ensuring that the youth truly are the hope of the motherland, "ang kabataan ang pag-asa ng bayan."

In view of the foregoing, the immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
