INTRODUCED BY REP. PATRICK MICHAEL "PM" D. VARGAS

AN ACT
PROVIDING A FREE CHILDCARE CENTER IN BARANGAY SANTA LUCIA, QUEZON CITY, AND PROVIDING FUNDS THEREFOR

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The State recognizes its constitutional duty to defend and strengthen the right of children to assistance, including proper care and nutrition, and special protection from all forms of neglect, abuse, cruelty, exploitation, and other conditions prejudicial to their development.

As such, the government enacted into law the Republic Act 6972, otherwise known as the Barangay-Level Total Development and Protection of Children Act, as well as signed the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child in 1990.

While these laws support the welfare of children, there is currently a gap in existing legislation that needs to be filled as regards the well-being of the parents of infants and toddlers who are struggling to find a balance between caring for their children while pursuing their respective careers.

It has been the primary goal of existing barangay daycare centers to prepare the children for formal schooling. With said primary goal in mind, existing barangay daycare centers have since only accommodated children between the ages of three years to four years and eleven months, despite being intended for all children below the age of five.

As a result of placing a minimum age to avail of the services of the designated barangay daycare centers, the parents of children below the age of three are forced to request help from their family members or hire domestic helpers to care for their child, while those who are not as fortunate are forced to stay at home and neglect their careers.

Recent World Bank and International Labor Organization estimates show that female labor force participation in the country remains at around 49% as of 2024-2025, reflecting minimal improvement over the past decades. Despite gains in education, a persistent gender gap of over 20 percentage points compared to men continues to characterize the Philippine labor market.

A large proportion of women are held back from gainful employment opportunities due to responsibilities to their respective families, more particularly, the caring of their children between the time they are born until two years of age¹. For women who cannot afford the cost of early childhood care, the most convenient option is to forego any economic opportunities to care for their infants and toddlers.

As the disparity in women's participation in the labor sector has been a constant hurdle in the State's goal of achieving gender equality, the present bill seeks to address this gap by providing a free childcare center to women and parents or guardians who are solo-parents, indigent, temporarily displaced, and/or are looking for job opportunities in Brgy. Santa Lucia, Quezon City. By establishing such infrastructure, infants and toddlers are given the care they are entitled to while giving their parents a fair chance to advance their respective careers.

It is the hope of this bill that the Philippines will eventually close the gender disparities in the country by providing full support to childcaring services. It is the intention of this bill to afford safe and nurturing spaces for infants and toddlers in our District, while giving the parents peace of mind as they work for a brighter future for their children.

In view of the foregoing, the approval of this bill is urgently sought.
